

MUN की बात

HFSMUN 2022

August 6, 2022.

Letter from the Team

Dear Delegates,

It's not about your victories, your impressions, or your stances. It's rather your experiences, ideas, reflections, and your memories that matter the most to us. As press, we record your metamorphosis from diffident amateurs to graceful connoisseurs. We hope that this press release never lets you forget the people, the words, and the actions that transformed your confined world into a journey that you would embark on with the insights that you must have gained.

With that, we hope no comments are taken personally. They are all directed to the individual that you have represented, and no personal attribute has been taken into consideration. We have tried our best to incorporate the noteworthy happenings of the day that would act as a blend of emotions- humour, vehemence, passion, mirth and sorrow, they all belong to you.

Happy reading!

INDEX

1. DISEC - Chaos is an Understatement
2. ICC - Roses for Dead Presidents
3. WHO - Contradictory Con Men
4. UNDP - Chernobyl 2.0
5. ECOFIN - Bye-bye Suka!
6. UNSC + UNGA - Bigg Boss: UN Edition

DISEC

Chaos is an Understatement
By Hetvi Patel and Chrysl Thomas

Are you even competent enough to be at the DISEC?

-Jitesh Mallareddy

The committee was in for a surprise on day 2 as they received news of ships from the UK killing 3 Somali fishermen. Guess who the 'Mastermind' was? Cue the drumroll...None other than our very own Djibouti! The fiery arrows of the blame game missed none- not even the Interpol, whom the Delegate of Djibouti indirectly accused of incompetency. The Delegate of Djibouti clearly hasn't watched the Spider-Man movie because if they had, they would have known that "with great power comes great responsibility".

The committee became what can only be defined as "the ultimate definition of chaos", as Somalia and Iraq locked horns with Djibouti and the UK. Yes, the Djiboutian delegate did try to cement their innocence, but who would believe them when out of nowhere the Somali delegate pulled out Djibouti's Defence Minister's emails, which clearly showed that the attack was his brainchild. The committee reached its pinnacle when the 2v2 started. Attacks were thrown in such quick succession that it was anything but easy to keep pace with them. "Do you know how a ship works?" (SOMALIA-1 DJIBOUTI-0) It was truly a sight to behold when Djibouti's delegate was not aware of her country's head and Somalia's delegate tried to cover up the fact that he did not know how big his country was.

In a sizzling hot development, agents of Interpol stormed into an already heated committee putting it at risk of getting overheated. The Interpol agents were very clear in their approach, they had to take action, and under no circumstances would they leave her unpunished. The repercussions hit hard, a sanction against Djibouti was levied of 1 billion dollars and trade unions were blocked. The agent extended the courtesy to the Delegate of Djibouti and asked them to use their common sense.

The committee moved on to an unexpected segment, the press conference. Camera flashes along with an influx of people squirming with very appropriate questions. The conference entailed a significant amount of exclamations to defend the parties' actions. It is expected that all loose ends will be tied up on the final day of the conference, and delegates are expected to perform at their best.

ICC

Roses for Dead Presidents
By Dimira Tanna

This is a rose, you can give it to Jawaharlal Nehru
in heaven.

-Jitesh Mallareddy

With the EB expecting more written directives and predicting an alliance between Fali Homi Major and Manmohan Singh, the second day of the Indian Crisis Cabinet dawned on the delegates.

A sudden crisis update brought news of failed air strikes on dummy bases on Pakistani soil, amidst protests in major Indian cities. The CIA reveals to RAW a recorded conversation between an LeT member to his deputy, seemingly referring to reassuring children on their entrance to heaven (like Chrissy, they won't be waking anytime soon), as well as the riots in the same Indian cities. The IAF apologises for the failed air strikes and blames visibility and system failures for the mishap, essentially saying nothing more than "Sorry for hitting the wrong target". PM Manmohan Singh reveals his intention of demanding an investigation into the IAF's work, particularly Fali Homi Major, dissatisfied with the excuse provided by them.

Finally, action was taken nearly a month after the initial terror attack when section 144 of the Indian Penal Code is implemented by Fali Homi Major and Manmohan Singh (after reconciling) in protesting cities. However, it was withdrawn almost immediately due to economic fallout in major cities.

In a horrifying update, the most wanted man in India is on the loose once more. Ajmal Kasab has gone missing from Arthur Road Jail in Mumbai, and the Intelligence Bureau under P.C. Haldar reveals that a phone call was made from Pakistan to a member of the committee, conveying Kasab's escape. That's right, there's a mole in the committee (Alexa play traitor), leading P. Chidambaram to plead with the delegates to take action, while Hasan Gafoor contradicts himself by saying, "It is not my fault but it is my failure," baffling the committee more than the plot of a Nolan film.

In order to catch the convicted criminal, teams are sent to three locations within the cities, Mumbai borders are shut, and a naval blockade forms in the Arabian Sea. "This is a rose, you can give it to Jawaharlal Nehru in heaven," says Narendra Modi to Manmohan Singh, commenting on the failures of the ATS.

Thus the EB's prediction runs true and the sun sets on the second day of the committee. Buzzing with anticipation to put forth a viable solution to the problem, the Indian Crisis Cabinet dispersed for the day, awaiting the next with fervour.

WHO

Contradictory Con Men
By Keya Revalkar

“

Let us take a moment of silence for the Delegate of Israel.

-Ishaan Patil

WHO? Not the committee, we mean the delegate. The delegate of USA kicked off the GSL by saying "even though the supreme court has declared abortion illegal, the US government has given the freedom to the state governments to formulate their own laws for abortion", (evidently, the delegate of the USA is absolutely self-contradictorial).

The delegate of Sudan stood strong in her stance and criticised other countries for allowing abortions: "How can a country's leader sleep peacefully at night knowing that murder is actually legal in their country?" The delegate requested transparency from other countries if South Sudanese women ask for abortions from other countries so that they may be punished when they return. The EB promptly called her out on her blatant hypocrisy: first and foremost, the country of South Sudan does not support abortion; secondly, due to the invasion of Ethiopia by South Sudan, there has been an increase in unwarranted pregnancies due to sexual harassment.

After this considerably mortifying moment, the committee was further thrown into a chaotic whirlwind when the guest delegate from Palestine made his dramatic entrance into the committee. A conflict (a rather obvious one at that) between the delegate of Palestine and the Israel's representative immediately ensued. The delegate of Israel was targeted ruthlessly by Palestine, who courageously stated, "The only reason Palestine needs abortion is due to Israeli forces in Palestine." Let us take a moment of silence for Israel's delegate. This fast-paced situation calmed down eventually, and the Moderated Caucus continued in its regular flow. They got down to business- the delegates formed two blocs: a pro-life bloc and a pro-choice bloc. The delegates made the decision to start drafting the resolution right after the break and thus, the committee continued regular proceedings.

Whether Abortion could be legalised throughout all countries or not is a question unanswered, but the committee is sure to undergo uncertain twists and turns which will be hopefully resorted to tomorrow.

UNDP

Chernobyl 2.0
By Divyansi Ghosh

“

DPRK is the biggest geopolitical mistake to ever happen.

-Ishaan Patil

Day 2 at the committee commenced with a series of events which comprised nothing short of thought-provoking, riveting debate. Dodging the existing predicament of disposal of nuclear waste, Israel enthusiastically promoted the 'Assimilation of knowledge'. A complete paradox since the disposal of nuclear waste was evidently their last priority.

Ukraine and Hungary raised a 2V2 with Russia and India. In the heat of the moment, the delegate of Ukraine stated the fact that no other nation disagreed with them and called for the immediate assassination of Vladimir Putin. As punishment for the disrespectful remark, the delegate of Ukraine had to dance with the delegate of Russia to a Russian song. "A country which does not have any money to feed its citizens cannot recycle nuclear waste", the delegate of Italy slammed the DPRK for its statement. At this point of affairs, a crisis emerged.

The Nuclear Power Plant in DPRK was malfunctioning while Saudi Arabia used this to their advantage to produce arms and weapons. Not only would this result in countless deaths, but also the turning of beloved Chernobyl into a complete tea party.

The Guest Delegate of Indonesia came with a whirlwind "DPRK is the biggest geopolitical mistake to ever happen." The world was literally on the brink of Chernobyl 2.0.

A radioactive leak resulted in the inevitable death of all the workers in the plant. Joe Biden addressed the committee and declared that North Korea had no freedom of press. 'How do we know that this is not a Yankee hoax', the DPRK replied. Joe Biden assured us that the footage was not tampered with and the whistleblowers were definitely legitimate (Keep in mind that North Korea is a prison for its own citizens.) The committee ended on the note of a constructive resolution with assassinations, crises, and fierce debate to follow in the next session!

ECOFIN

Bye-bye Suka!

By Suvarnalakshmi Sankaranarayanan and Durva Bhatt

Hail Putin! UK has shamelessly tried to justify this invasion which can only be reasoned by the delegate of the UK's brain shrinking due to the lack of a 'bo'oh'o'wa'er'.

-Helena Chirayath

The committee commenced with an update on the crisis that an unknown party bombed and severely damaged the top Russian crude oil facilities in Siberia, Volgograd, and Nizhny Novgorod. Inevitably, the blame game began with the committee discussing everything but economic and financial affairs.

The delegate of the UK did not hold back and referred to Putin as a small, pathetic little man who had no way to express his frustration with his manipulative, gold digger girlfriend, other than killing civilians and wreaking havoc on the world. He further expressed that even if Putin dies of liver failure caused by all the vodka, he will not die a martyr or a war hero. The Venezuelan representative exhibited its firm support towards Russia as "They have always been of help against the treacherous sanctions imposed by the USA and their awfully brainless allies. Hail Putin! UK has shamelessly tried to justify this invasion which can only be reasoned by the delegate of the UK's brain shrinking due to the lack of a "bo'oh'o'wa'er'."

As if the committee debate wasn't intense enough, it was exposed that the United Kingdom financially supported Japan in its bombing of Russia, and the leader of the Yakuza entered to release the fact that they were the 'unknown party' behind the bombing. "For the Dollar!", was his justified reply.

Saudi Arabia used this opportunity and increased the rates of crude oil breathing life back into the committee with fierce discussion on the topic at hand. Committee took a sharp turn when it was discovered that Stanley Meyer, the creator of water-powered automobiles isn't dead! He was hidden by the United Kingdom! Saudi Arabia's plans were foiled and the whole aspect of the oil crisis was ultimately decoded.

UNSC + UNGA

Bigg Boss: UN Edition

By Nidhi Shah, Aditi Munot, Shivanshi Singh and Bhumi Dedhia

Geneva's convention?
More like Geneva's suggestion.

-Jitesh Mallareddy

-Helena Chirayath

New day, new crisis, or so seems to be the ongoing trend. This time, however, it was a rare joint-committee crisis, where the UNGA and UNSC amalgamated to resolve the crucial crisis of Ukrainian troops taking prisoners of war from their ongoing conflict with Russia; a diabolical case where fishermen from multiple countries were found with bullet-riddled bodies; and an international blockade by the US navy in the Strait of Malacca. All the speakers on the SSL addressed various aspects of this disturbance with fervour.

Ukraine took a strong stand and condemned Russia for its heinous acts. It brashly announced to all of its opponents that they would have the support of several nations, most notably France with its 80,000 troops. Its strikingly different stance from the previous day resulted in one of their own allies, the USA, questioning them and demanding an explanation for their actions against the prisoners of war, which were a clear violation of the Geneva Convention. The delegate of India did not hesitate to share the same sentiment, claiming that both Ukraine and Russia were "treating the Geneva convention more like the damn Geneva suggestion."

As is customary, China and the USA engaged in verbal sparring (nothing different from any episode of our beloved Bigg Boss). The US delegate went ahead and twisted the representative of China's words, compelling them to admit that China did manipulate currency in the global market. China reciprocated, stating that the United States blockade in the Malacca Strait was to pose a worldwide economic crisis. Delegates continued to play the blame game back and forth. Iran called the United States "trigger happy," and India, maintaining its neutrality, divided the blame between both Russia and China for their bad blood, and now they got problems. South Korea, on the other hand, focused its energies on the fate of the unfortunate fishermen, putting the blame on Russia due to an indirect connection.

Despite being criticised by the majority of the SSL speakers for its blockade, the US defended its actions by claiming that they were fully legal and in accordance with the NATO and Geneva Accords.

The delegate of the USA even rebuked China's claims of economic depression, stating that they were giving more aid than any other country. They did, however, end their speech on a very controversial note when they said, in reference to France's sending of 80,000 troops, "the only way you can send 80,000 troops is if you send 40,000 pregnant women." Although the delegate knew they would be barred from the committee, it did not stop them from making this statement and walking out of the committee themselves immediately after.

Before the SSL could end, the war cabinet was disrupted by a guest delegate, Joe Biden, who notified us of an update on the crisis. Ukraine's General of the Army, Viktor Muzhenko, had been taken hostage by Russia. Leaders of Nicaragua and Poland condemned the acts of the government, 77 fishermen's corpses were found with bullet holes in their bodies, etched with the word 'WAGNER' on them. Yet what was more startling than the ending of 'Game of Thrones' was that a new leak on Wikileaks showed damning evidence that the United States was planning to bomb Ukrainian territories.

The crisis abruptly elapsed and the war cabinet adjourned, forcing the committees to revert to their original agendas, abandoning the crisis with no resolution.

-Ishaan Patil

-Ishaan Patil

Press Corps

Head- Sejal Agarwal

Deputy Head- Rijul Kharat

Editor-in-Chief- Tanishka Wagh

Writers

Nidhi Shah

Aditi Munot

Bhumi Dedhia

Shivanshi Singh

Chrysl Sheckina

Dimira Tanna

Divyansi Ghosh

Durva Bhatt

Hetvi Patel

Keya Revalkar

Meeth Parikh

Suvarnalakshmi Sankaranarayanan

Illustrators

Helena Chirayath

Ishaan Patil

Jitesh Mallareddy