OPENING CEREMONY

The journey began with a profound aspiration - a vision to soar to great heights, to dedicate ourselves to humanity's service, and to make an indelible impact. Nurtured under the auspices of this grand aspiration, the HFS Model United Nations (HFSMUN), a collaborative initiative by ISC and IBDP, proudly commenced its 12th annual conference. The inauguration ceremony was an unforgettable testament to the spirit of HFSMUN, weaving together the joy, anticipation, and significance of that momentous day.

In keeping with India's timeless tradition of seeking divine blessings on every occasion, the opening ceremony struck a resonant chord with the school choir's recitation of a prayer. Embodying the essence of our school motto, "Sound Mind in Sound Body," the harmonious rendition of the school song touched the hearts of every attendee. Erika Goyal, an exceptionally talented young author at the tender age of 8, captivated us with her innocent voice as she recited a self-authored poem, "Unity in Diversity."

Following the auspicious invocation of the divine, our Head of School, Mrs. Kalyani Patnaik, spoke eloquently to the delegates. Her nostalgic speech was a journey through the past, present, and future of HFSMUN, filled with passion and wisdom. Our esteemed chief guest and trustee, Dr. Niranjana Hiranandani, epitomized the true spirit of our event, illuminating the urgent need for the youth to raise their voices, battle injustice, and champion equality.

The Under-Secretary General, Meeth Parikh, and Shloka Shetty infused energy into the atmosphere at Meluha with their inspiring words. They introduced the Secretariat, Organising Committee, and The Executive Board, acknowledging the tireless dedication and hard work that had been invested over the past six months.

HFSMUN's vision this year was 'Inclusivity and Diversity'. We were touched by the presence of First Generation students from Vidya Niketan Academy from Srirampur. Embracing their fresh perspectives and unique insights, we collectively fostered an environment that celebrated differences, united our goals, and enriched the entire HFSMUN experience.

His Excellency, Damien Irzyk, the Consul-General of the Republic of Poland in Mumbai, delivered a poignant speech on the burgeoning friendship between India and Poland. His words underscored the bond between the two nations, further solidifying the motto of HFSMUN.

Our Director General, Maanya Lal, presented an emotive speech, reflecting on her personal journey through the years of the conference. Her narrative, from being a nervous delegate to presiding over the 12th annual conference, resonated deeply with every young delegate aspiring to make their mark in the MUN world.

Lastly, the Secretary General, Teesta Bhattacharya, invigorated the numerous delegates present with her stimulating words. Her reassurance that their voices over the next three days were destined to create a phenomenal impact set the stage for a groundbreaking conference. With a powerful strike of her gavel, she commenced the sessions, igniting a spirit of debate and diplomacy. As the committees began with a bang, the air was charged with enthusiasm, passion, and the shared purpose of making a difference. The journey had only just begun, and the legacy of HFSMUN was ready to be written anew.

ECOSOC

DRIVING OUT THE DOLLAR

BY ADVIKA MANE AND DISHA ANGADI

The first and longest-running caucus was on the advantages of using alternative currencies and the agenda of de-dollarization. China, as cheeky as usual, called its currency attractive, vying for the support of other countries. Sweden, the pioneer of all discussions, said that it seeks to encourage stability in the world economy and freedom of choice for all countries. The great Democrat! The delegate of India gave a considerate view as usual, stating that de-dollarization is essential for the self-reliance of economies.

Russia boldly claimed that "The main cause of the economic crisis is the US Dollar!". South Korea reconsidered its previous policy and reasoned that even though it may have heavily invested in the USA in the past, the recent fluctuations in the USA obligate it to prefer more stable options.

The USA, feeling wronged, especially by Russia, said that it is impossible to replace the dollar, especially with the value of the Russian ruble falling and the complexity of accepting China's yuan. The USA further attacked Russia, patriotically declaring that it is the US dollar that is saving the world from economic ruin and not the other 'flimsy' currencies.

In an air of courage, Denmark remarked that the US Dollar is a "Political toy" of the USA to plunder other countries. The USA was faced with constant and recurring slander and vehemently stated that introducing the Chinese Yuan and brick currency is impossible since India and China will only cooperate when "pigs start to fly". China, too, is dangerous to depend on since it openly violates the independence of other nations.

The attacks didn't end there. Pakistan called the USA's integrity into question, making an all-encompassing statement: "We all know how ethical the USA's history has been". The right to reply was raised by the USA, which proclaimed that such a statement is controversial coming from Pakistan, which has always supported terrorism, silencing Pakistan.

The Czech Republic spoke ambitiously, stating that "if the US sneezes, the whole world catches a cold." In conclusion, the committee was marked by the Fall of the USA's supporters and open questioning of its authority. Truly tragic, isn't it?

UNITED NATIONS TRIBUNE:

United Nations Tribune: Sweden accused Finland's speech of being too self-centred. Moreover, it was accused of being focused on short-term goals and disregarding the interests of other countries. The chant "ATTACK ON FINLAND" reverberated throughout the committee. How will the delegate from Finland respond?

Gandhi: Friend or Foe?

India, as a whole, rose to the stage when the talk of partition came to light; and the same start was seen with the Indian Crisis Cabinet.

Mahatma Gandhi continued to hold his stance of 'Ahimsa'. The committee kicked off with a humorous start when Sir Archibald Wavell bellowed, "The chances of Mohandas Karamchand Gandhi getting India independence is lesser than the number of hair strands on his head." There seemed to be a lack of consensus among the British delegates when Lord Clement Attlee quoted, "Sir Archibald does not speak for the whole of the United Kingdom." Adding to this fiery start, Mohammed Ali Jinnah reacted, calling Mahatma Gandhi "an agent of the British" and an "Incompetent Leader".

With his words reverberating through the room, Jinnah's bold speech caused an uproar within the committee resulting in a riveting session of Q&A. This controversial speech raised yet another crisis. Kazi Abdul Gaffar, Agha Khan III and Sir Archibald Wavell - the holy trinity - were barred from the committee for using unparliamentary language and making racist comments. As the crisis resumed, Zakir Hussain, vehemently expressed that he was not in favour of the partition and that the Muslim League was doing it for their own selfish gains. As soon as the crisis was nearly extinguished, another lit up. The Times of India released a front-page article (source: Zakir Hussain) with a picture of Mahatma Gandhi's infamous incestuous relations with his niece. Prince Phillip enraged, came all the way to India - personally - to address the matter when someone screamed "ALLAH HU AKBAR" and brutally assassinated him with a gun (the light-up kind).

Further, on 12th December 1946, in a momentous change, Lord Mountbatten ascended to power as the Governor-General of British India - replacing Sir Archibald Wavell. Khan retaliated against the allegation of the assassin being a Muslim; saying that yelling three words "ALLAH HU AKBAR" does not alone confirm the individual's identity as a Muslim. Wavell, in an official press release, announced his conversion to Islam to take 'revenge' and changed his name to 'MOHAMMED WAVELL'.

The Indian Crisis Committee, living up to its name, broke into yet another crisis; as reports showed leaked New Year's pictures of a man in Edwina Mountbatten's chambers (initially assumed to be Lord Mountbatten but later suggested to be a man "of Indian build"- Jawaharlal Nehru), engaging in questionable activities; spark speculation and rumours of affairs and damage control during India's turbulent times.

This backfired on Mahatma Gandhi too. The whole room began questioning his orientation, as pictures of him and Prince Phillip (prior to his death) were leaked to the media.

In a radio broadcast by 'Doordarshan,' it was revealed that Veer Savarkar, a notable Indian activist, had penetrated the INC, leading to rumours that 80% of the INC members were against having Gandhi and Nehru among them. Subsequent to this, many delegates expressed the view that Gandhi and Nehru were unfit, not only for the INC but also for India as a whole.

Wavell, commanding everyone's attention, revealed the startling information that Subhash Chandra Bose might still be alive, contradicting the widely accepted story of his death in a so-called "plane crash." He narrated an incident where a mysterious man visited him after hours, claiming to possess crucial information that would be of help to Wavell. The conspiracy was then dramatically emphasized with the powerful exclamations "INQILAB ZINDABAD" and "ALLAH HU AKBAR."

Meanwhile, lively repartee between Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel and Jawaharlal Nehru added to the day's excitement. It reached a peak when Patel accused Nehru of prioritizing his interest in women over his dedication to the nation. With tact and wit, Nehru deftly refuted the charges and continued his critique of Gandhi, dismissively labelling him as the "Britisher's puppet."

Thus, the curtain fell on the first day of the Indian Crisis Cabinet, leaving behind a trail of intrigue, contention, and anticipation. The delegates departed with a sense of eagerness for the forthcoming day, fully aware that more action and excitement awaited them in the dynamic landscape of political debate and decision-making.

NATO

TEARS OF ARTICLE V

BY RIYA NEGANDHI AND SHALVIKAA UDAPURKAR

"All NATO does is hinder peace," a rather strong indictment against the "international body that's literally charged with maintaining peace and security among Europe and America," declares the delegate of Russia.

Today's agenda, by general consensus, was centred on Interpreting the "Ambit of the Collective Defence Policy and the Use of Article V of the NATO Charter." The session commenced with Russia candidly accusing NATO of overstepping its bounds and extending its power eastward. This was supported by a demonstration with the assistance of a map, which was sadly torn to shreds ("What a waste of coloured ink," to quote the Director.) However, the delegate was awarded a Melody regardless. Contradictory? Not as much as Russia's bombing of Ukraine in "self-defence."

Further on, the committee raised a motion discussing the applications and amendments to Article V. "A NATO Ally falls victim to an armed attack; every other member of the Alliance will see this act of violence as an armed attack against all members and will take the actions it deems necessary to aid the Ally attacked," proclaimed Belarus. The highlight of the motion was the three-sided 'triangular' solution, "Patti Patni aur Voh, put forth by Germany: Comprehensive solutions, inclusive diplomacy, and the concept of defence against NATO. As the moderated caucus proceeded, Denmark expressed its steadfast belief in involving the general public in decisions about the Article V amendment. Albeit, the speech had one advantage: Russia and the USA found common ground regarding its apparent "dumb" nature.

Lastly, another motion, passed by Norway, broached the subject of clarifying the definition of what constitutes an armed attack and military aggression.

The intricate discussions and spirited debates reflected the commitment and passion of all those involved in fostering international diplomacy and understanding. The collaborative efforts to interpret and engage with NATO's policies have indeed been a highlight of the day. Day 1 of NATO was led to success by the executive board comprising Kabir Kapoor, Gokula Krishnan, and Neev Ramani.

ISKI USKI, FOREIGN WHISKEY?

BY NAVYA JOSHI, KIMAYA DESHPANDE,
DHAIRYA PATEL

It was the best of times. It was the worst of times. The UNSC witnessed everything from musical ensembles to displays of "physiological flexibility", but most of all, a plethora of controversial statements and accusations. The agenda passed was the 'Adoption of new members to The Permanent Members of the UNSC, status, and removal of certain members.'

With the occasional mishaps when the delegate from China inadvertently referred to themselves as the representative of Japan, hours in committee were coloured with well-thought-out arguments. The delegates of the United States of America stated that they wished for more Asian representation of countries with Veto power but strongly opposed the present power of China as a permanent member. Mexico attempted to emphasise the importance of their speech with the assistance of musical interjections, forcing Russia to interrupt them by stating "You should consider a career in music because the points you are making do not deserve this music and hypocrisy".

Controversies arose when the delegate of the USA openly declared the president of Russia, Vladimir Putin, "an International criminal"; and instead of opposing this outrageous statement, Russia went on to call out Donald Trump as a criminal. The chaos only escalated from there into an appalling crisis! Not only was the committee merrily clapping while a dying Vladimir Putin was carried in from the Kremlin, but there were also ecstatic screams and exclamations because the USA, UK, and Italy allegedly orchestrated the attack, backed by the presence of foreign whiskey and cigarettes. The Indian Minister for Foreign Affairs elected to forge an alliance with Egypt and various African countries to secure a seat on the Security Council. However, all such assertive efforts were rendered fruitless by another shocking diplomatic event: the assassination of French President Emmanuel Macron's nephew and partner, who were both killed by a German. What a chaotic state of affairs in the world! Of course, to no one's surprise, controversial statements and hilarious Gen-Z memes flooded the halls. Russia: "Why does the KGB have to make anything clear in a committee where it suspects three countries?" USA: "How can we trust a committee that treats countries like mere pieces of paper?" - The committee proceedings took an unexpected turn when the delegate from Mexico made a curious request to the chair, asking for permission to remove their blazer for the sake of 'physiological flexibility.' Meanwhile, Russia, feeling a palpable sense of betrayal at the notion of India distancing itself, took the dramatic step of severing all ties with India. Now, that's taking precautions! The atmosphere in the committee further intensified when Morocco put forth a startling theory that India was behind the assassinations of Vladimir Putin and Emmanuel Macron. Russia, not to be outdone, was colourfully referred to as "The sugar daddy of Pakistan."

The rhetoric and energy only escalated from there. In conclusion, today's session revealed the delegates' readiness to delve into complex and at times provocative strategies, unafraid to stir the pot on the world stage. Their A-game was on full display, and they certainly did not shy away from generating global turmoil with their rather unconventional and audacious policies. It was a day marked by bold decisions and unexpected twists, leaving all eagerly awaiting what tomorrow might bring.

QUR'AN AND HARAM

BY SHREYA VIJAYANAND AND AAROHI DESHPANDE

Could these countries genuinely benefit from aid and support, considering the challenges they face? Is the USA utilizing the General Assembly to promote its own agendas in the committee? These are the questions that arose in the DISEC committee of HFSMUN'23.

Afghanistan's pursuit of self-sufficiency through Islamic principles led to unintended consequences, empowering the Taliban. This paradox sparked a crucial inquiry: Can a "Pure and perfect Sharia" effectively address modern challenges? Similarly, Palestine's use of Islamic law to justify conflicts raised ethical concerns. To assess the compatibility of "Pure and perfect Sharia" with contemporary norms and global peace, was an endeavour that all delegates undertook today.

*Overflowing pride for you and a soul driven only by
will bring in solidarity or division?*

Russia had claimed, "Our motto is action," but their actions of late contradicted this statement. Surprisingly, their actions were directed towards Ukraine instead of countries truly in need of alliances, especially considering Russia's position as a P5 member. However, a noteworthy moment that caught the attention of delegates was when Russia blew a kiss at Ukraine, leaving some to speculate on the nature of their intentions – a sign of 'alliance,' perhaps? Whether it was of a political or more personal nature was open to interpretation.

Subsequently, a heated argument ensued, leading to the conclusion that UAE was deemed incompetent. Yemen pointed out that the only tangible outcome of UAE's involvement in the case of Yemeni Houthis was sending its citizens to Allah, seeking salvation. UAE defended itself by claiming the attack on Yemen was "unintentional," but this sparked confusion in the atmosphere, leaving doubts about UAE's commitment to promoting global peace.

Throughout the discourse in DISEC, camaraderie and tension intermingled, creating a dynamic stage for impassioned discussions. Delegates faced the challenge of navigating intricate issues while upholding cooperation, accountability, and the provision of genuine aid. Ensuring DISEC's relevance in addressing global security challenges remained paramount.

World Peace Bulletin:

The only time there was consensus in the committee was when all the delegates agreed on Joe Biden sounding like a dead mouse. The applause? thunderous.

LOCHA E NUCLEAR WEAPONS

BY OINDRILLA GHOSH, VYOMINI NATHWANI & RAJVI BALAR

The room was filled with a palpable mix of tension and nervousness as the delegates took their seats, ready to represent their countries with valour as if they were part of a real United Nations gathering.

Spectacular, captivating, and indelibly etched in our minds, the inaugural day of HFSMUN'23 was unlike anything we could have predicted.

The delegates' enthusiasm for the agenda item on the 'Relevance of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty (NPT)' ignited the General Speaker's List (GSL) with unparalleled energy. Eager and bright-eyed, they leaned forward on the edge of their seats, much like Holt awaiting the next NYPD commissioner's announcement in Brooklyn Nine-Nine. The UK set the stage ablaze with a powerful speech, reminiscent of Rahul Gandhi's determination to become India's next prime minister. Then China took the floor, transforming the committee into a frenzy akin to a Tom & Jerry episode, leaving us all amused and engaged.

The EB guided the committee with finesse, occasionally frustrated by the quality of the chits, calling them as mediocre as Travis Scott's new album. Israel came in with guns blazing, calling out North Korea, and, as a form of apology, had to sing the Palestinian national anthem.

As the day progressed, the committee snowballed into action. Pakistan aimed to promote peace but hesitated to sign the treaty due to perceived loopholes. Meanwhile, Israel's scintillating comments sowed seeds of discord, adding a dynamic twist to the discussions. Additionally, there were gasps around the conference room when Israel recognised Palestine as a whole nation under the Oslo Accords.

ILLUSTRATED BY RIYAAN RANEY

The GSL continued to foster spirited debates until the EB concluded the session, granting an efficient hour and fifteen minutes for the delegates to prepare their working papers for the following day. The outcome of the session was remarkably fruitful, leaving the committee on a tantalising cliffhanger. We wait with bated breath to see what the delegates and EB have in store for themselves tomorrow.

HUMAN RIGHTS; OR WRONGS?!

BY ANAAMYA PANCHAL, JAANVI MOHNOT & RHEA ROY

"I'm sure everybody is ready to shoot us down with claims of human rights violations!" was the opening of China's GSL. And BAM, began day 1 of UNHRC at HFSMUN'23. 'Freedom of Speech and Expression' being the agenda, GSLs were given by bright delegates. Next came the committee's first moderated caucus: 'Deliberating the root cause of Human Rights denial.' Both superpowers and small countries took the floor. Things took an argumentative turn after Russia called the LGBTQIA+ community "a plague." This called for fiery remarks from the USA, and in response, the delegate of Russia quoted their president, Vladimir Putin, calling it the "Devil's work." Several eminent countries were met with arguments and contradictions on the contentious agenda. France boasted of their freedoms and was immediately questioned on the ban on hijabs in their country and the killings of the POC. However, as slyly as a fox, the delegate of France retaliated with, "A Muslim woman can commit the same crimes a Christian woman can. Hijabs and Niqabs are banned for safety reasons pertaining to face recognition." Post-lunch, several fresh ideas circulated the room among the enthusiastic delegates, and France's suggestion on 'Religious Norms and Blasphemy', based on the agenda, was passed by a majority.

Guest delegate Aryaveer Singh, the Director of UNGA, soon took over the Taliban-led government of Afghanistan. Allegations against ally countries of the LGBTQIA+ community included statements such as "We believe in a woman and a man; a man and a woman. No more permutations and combinations." In response, the USA too vocalised towards Russia: "You accuse us of terrorism when your own President has an ARREST WARRANT!" Argumentative debates between powerful blocs and ongoing GSLs were the crux of the day. This action-packed day seems to be just the beginning. Human rights are nowhere near solved yet....Let's see what surprises await us on day 2!
